

A photograph of an archaeologist in a striped shirt and blue jeans kneeling on a dirt site, using a trowel to work on a large, light-colored stone fragment. In the foreground, there are several ancient terracotta vessels, including a large two-handled jar and a smaller one. In the background, a large, rectangular stone block with faint inscriptions is visible. The overall scene is an archaeological excavation site.

Comune di Cittareale
British School at Rome
Università di Perugia
Soprintendenza per i Beni Archeologici del Lazio

Scavi di Falacrinae

I PRIMI RISULTATI

2005

CONFERENZA STAMPA

Mercoledì 31 Agosto 2005

ore 18,30

Aula Consiliare

CITTAREALE (RIETI)